TASTE

Chicago eats

Grant Park

It's that time of year again. Navigate the crowds to buy samples of scrumptious local eats at the 30th annual Taste of Chicago (Grant Park, 100 E. Congress Pkwy.), including bites from fest newcomers Shokolad Pastry and Cafe (2524 W. Chicago Ave.), Churro Factory (2214 S. Wolcott Ave.), Carbon (300 W. 26th St.), Iyanze (4623 N. Broadway), Doreen's Pizzeria (13201 S. Baltimore Ave.) and lots more. Our strategy? Get there early, buy up food, then stake out a spot at the Taste Stage to see Mannequin Men (4 p.m. Saturday) or the Petrillo Music Shell to see Bush frontman Gavin Rossdale (5:30 p.m. Saturday). Free; $8 per strip of 12 food-drink tickets.

When: 11 a.m.-9 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Through July 4.

SHOW

Your Chicago Pride

Boystown, River North

GLBT pride brims from Boystown and beyond this weekend with music, dancing, celeb appearances and lots of fabulous outfits leading up to Chicago Pride Parade (Halsted Street and Belmont Avenue). Parties abound through the night, from Pride Prom at Mary's Attic (5400 N. Clark St.) to Girl Blast in the lot behind Ann Sather (909 W. Belmont Ave.). Don't miss the Chicago Pride Party at Vision (632 N. Dearborn St.), where Katy Perry is scheduled to make a special appearance. We suspect this "California Gurl" will show up dressed for summer.

When: Noon Sunday (parade); 9 p.m. Saturday (Pride Prom); 2 p.m. Sunday (Girl Blast); 8 p.m. Sunday (Pride Party)

PARTY

Tour de Fat

Logan Square

Like bikes? Like beers? Welcome to a little slice of heaven. New Belgium Brewery rolls into Palmer Square Park (3100 W. Palmer Blvd.) again for its annual Tour de Fat festival of music, bike contests and, per the name, Fat Tire amber ale vendors. Arrive early to watch the kick-off bike parade (10 a.m.), then stick around for general revelry, performances by Colorado's the Dovekins (12:40 p.m.) and Chicago's own Mucca Pazza (2:50 p.m.), and the main events: a giveaway of the coveted 2010 New Belgium custom bicycle (this Felt cruiser currently is on sale for $1,400 on eBay) and the car-bike swap. Free. Optimal bike parking available.

When: 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday

Green Music Fest

East Village / Ukrainian Village

The name of this second annual festival (Chicago and Ashland Avenues) pretty much says it all. Green-minded folks gather to rock out to Subterranean-booked bands between swapping enviro-friendly ideas, shopping at a green market and sipping craft beers for sale (Magic Hat Odd Notion wheat, Abita Turbo Dog, Southern Tier Phin & Matt's ale and more). Rock out to acts and DJs on two stages, including not-to-be-missed performances by reggae masters the Wailers (8 p.m. Saturday) and Minneapolis rockers Cloud Cult (8:45 p.m. Sunday) pushing out songs from their forthcoming "Light Chasers." $5 suggested donation.

When: Noon-10 p.m. Saturday, Sunday

Do's and Don'ts for Pride 2010

DO:

» Start the day off with a few mimosas (like we needed an excuse)

» Dance! Spontaneous dance parties are often a part of the parade and after-events.

» Respect your parade-viewing neighbors. Remember that the parade is attended by guests of all ages.

DON'T:

» Be a mess (you know who you are)

» Drink out of glass containers. No one wants to step on glass!

» Wear uncomfortable footwear. Standing is inevitable.

The Thing

This fan looks like he escaped from a Japanese game show and fled to South Africa. What is he — a bowling pin? This outfit is a hot mess, yet we can't stop looking.

The Katy Perry

Rocking the blue hair recently sported by a certain "California Gurls" singer, this Italian fan adds her own flair with the colors of the Italian flag — even on her lips. Bravo!

The Gentleman

This American fan's outfit has everything: oversized flag bowtie, flag bandana and plastic glasses. All worn with a classic button-down white shirt. Are you getting this, GQ?

DRESSED TO THRILL

What is it about the World Cup that motivates fans to turn the stands into a mashup of "Project Runway," "America's Next Top Model" and "RuPaul's Drag Race"? We'd speculate on the patriotic reasons for the daily fashion shows we've seen in South Africa, but it's more fun to look at pictures of decked-out fans. Here are our tongue-in-cheek fashion critiques.

The Goat King

The eyes say "Blue Steel," and the face paint and horns say Lady Gaga stage performer. This Ghana fan is so hot Tim Gunn would weep at the mere sight of him.

Once upon a slam

Bedtime tradition finding new life with Chicago groups

By Kyra Kyles | REDEYE

Everybody's got a story.

And more locals are excited to tell theirs, whether from the center of a semi-circle in an intimate boutique or onstage at a packed-to-capacity bar.

Story slams, kissing cousins to poetry slams, are emerging on the local scene, according to some participants and event organizers who spoke to RedEye, as enthusiasts look to restore face-to-face interaction they say increasingly is lost amid avatars, tweets and fleeting Facebook updates.

"Storytelling is incredibly old-school. ... It is the world's first art form," said Sarah Jenness, national producing director of The Moth StorySLAM, a white-hot monthly storytelling competition that, after 14 years in New York, spread its tale-telling tentacles to Chicago in September.

The Moth, currently in four cities, will expand to at least two, possibly four, more cities next year, Jenness said. And the popularity of slams even has spread to the celebsphere. Famous Moth participants include Moby, Margaret Cho, DMC and Ethan Hawke, drawing even more attention to the trend.

What's the draw? People just want to tell their stories, uninterrupted and uninhibited, said Bill Hillmann, founder of Windy City Story Slam, which meets monthly at Empty Bottle in Ukrainian Village.

"You get a rush when you do it," said Hillmann, 28, who founded the event in 2007 and originally ran it out of an art space in Humboldt Park.

The former amateur boxer said up to 600 people can be expected at the circle's annual national competition, some traveling from across the country to attend and support their city.

"The best nights are when you get four, five or six stories of people who bring something so unique, so much personality and life experience and they're willing to share it with strangers," Hillmann said.

People from all professions and backgrounds participate in the story slams RedEye explored, and word-of-mouth keeps the circles widening.

"Every single time I come, I bring a whole different mess of folks and encourage other storytellers to try it as well," said Dana Norris, a Lincoln Square resident who has competed in The Moth four times.

Norris, 31, said the experience is thrilling.

"The audience is very honest. The judges are very honest," she said. "All are very receptive, if not kinda drunk."

Storytelling fulfills a basic human need, according to Cara Brigandi, co-founder of Chicago slam group Grown Folks Stories.

"We need to look at each other, hear inflection and see the way the human body moves when we're telling a story," said Brigandi, a 36-year-old marketing executive from Lincoln Square. "That's what connects us."

Grown Folks Stories, which is held in Wicker Park's Silver Room, also is experiencing a surge of interest, Brigandi said. She created the storytelling circle along with Silver Room owner Eric Williams after determining

STORYTELLER VARIETY

The story slam format varies from group to group, with some insisting on true stories, while others are open to flights of fiction. Some, such as New York-based The Moth StorySLAM, evaluate and award participants who adhere to a theme, while others encourage the judgment-free sharing of stories of any kind. Some circles are open to reading, while others insist that tellers commit most of their material to memory.

that the funny stories they shared with each other needed to be expanded to a much larger group. That monthly group, which started with 15 attendees, now holds steady at about 120, according to Brigandi, and may even outgrow its current space.

Grown Folk Stories regular Chauncey Hollingsworth, 36, initially was scared to share a story about an early sexual experience with strangers, but after losing his figurative GFS virginity this past winter, the Roscoe Village resident is hooked.

"I was on a bus and a girl came up randomly and asked, 'Were you at Grown Folks Stories?' and I told her I was," Hollingsworth said. "She told me it was a great story, got off the bus and that was that. It was fantastic and it made my day."

“Relax and be yourself. The beauty of the storytellers is that each brings a unique aspect of their personality out in front of the group.”

—CHAUNCEY HOLLINGSWORTH

Grown Folks Stories regular

CHRISTOPHER SMITH/REDEYE

Aspiring writer Nicolette Kittinger, 23, didn't think much of Windy City Story Slam when she met organizer Hillmann two years ago. She'd had her fill of “readings,” where she said intellectuals seemingly met to stroke each other's egos.

But now Kittinger is a regular competitor, a two-time finalist in its all-city championship and an assistant producer to the event she once shunned.

“Something magical happens when there's a really great story and everyone is listening,” Kittinger said. “It's crazy. With all this technology and no lack in other sources of entertainment, there are a lot of people still willing to pay $5 to tell and hear stories.” KKYLES@TRIBUNE.COM

SLAM WITH REDEYE

Want to slam with us? Submit a story to RedEye, and Bill Hillmann of Windy City Story Slam will pick 10 storytellers to perform in our office in an exclusive slam. The winner might be featured on our website! E-mail your best story in one paragraph, along with your name, age and neighborhood to redeyetalk@gmail.com by noon on July 5. Visit redeyechicago.com for all of the details.

“Set up a story in a way that you're comfortable. Use your own voice and remember that nobody is out to get anybody.”

—Cara Brigandi, Grown Folks Stories co-founder

FROM THE PROS

Are you nervous about sharing your story? Don't worry. We've got some storytelling tips, culled from event organizers and regular Joes and Janes who recently took to the stage. Check out their advice and then be ready to scream your story from the highest rooftop ... or stage — whichever you prefer. K.K.

“The most popular topic is sex and the most popular delivery is ‘funny,’ so it might be best to combine them.”

—Nicolette Kittinger, 23, Windy City Story Slam assistant producer and all-city finalist (2008, 2009)

“The people who don't do as well onstage are people who don't trust themselves, meaning that if you've got a certain turn of phrase or use of language, or way of describing things naturally, I wouldn't shy away from that. Embrace that.”

—Sarah Jenness, The Moth StorySLAM producing director

“Practice telling your story to your family, tell it to your friends. Get carried away with the story and relive the moment. We've had all kinds of stories win. You've just got to be up for it.”

—Bill Hillmann, Windy City Story Slam founder

“You need to practice. You need to rehearse, and know what you're going to say. The stories I've enjoyed the most are the most conversational.”

—Dana Norris, 31, Lincoln Square, The Moth StorySLAM regular

CHOOSE YOUR STORY SPEED

Think you're ready to share your story with strangers? RedEye breaks down The Moth, Grown Folks Stories and Windy City Story Slam to help you choose the best platform for your first storytelling slam. K.K.

Windy City Story Slam

windycitystoryslam.com

When: First Saturday of every month

Where: Empty Bottle at 1035 N. Western Ave. for “at least the next six months,” organizer Bill Hillmann told RedEye

Cost: $5 to participate and watch

Picking participants:

Interested storytellers are encouraged to attend an open mic night, usually held earlier in the evening before the actual slam. Standouts typically are asked to participate in the next month's slam.

Rules: Storytellers can share any kind of tale—fact or fiction—within a five-minute time frame. During slams, storytellers can use notes or read completely “off paper,” but for the annual national competition, no notes allowed.

Judging: Audience approval is measured via an applause-o-meter for the slams, but in the national competition there is a judges' choice and then a people's choice prize, the latter judged by applause.

The Moth StorySLAM

themoth.org/storyslams\_chicago

When: Last Tuesday of every month

Where: Martyrs' at 3855 N. Lincoln Ave.

Cost: $7 to participate and watch

Picking participants: Moth organizers disseminate the theme for the next month via their website, e-mail and social networking channels. Interested storytellers are “warned” to prepare a six-minute story fitting that theme, and 10 names are drawn on the night of the monthly events. Names are selected throughout the event.

Rules: “Truthful” stories are encouraged, and paper is prohibited, so prepare, prepare, prepare. “I don't suggest that people memorize, but they should know the basic bullet points,” national producing director, Sarah Jenness, who is headquartered in New York, told RedEye

Judging: Randomly selected audience members judge storytellers using numerical scoring from 1 to 10. Currently, there is no grand city slam for Moth, but there will be by the fall, according to Jenness.

Grown Folks Stories

Facebook: Grown Folks Stories

When: Third Thursday of every month

Where: Silver Room at 1442 N. Milwaukee Ave.

Cost: Free

Picking participants:

Attendees pick out of a hat, with approximately 10 to 15 storytellers allowed per session.

Rules: There are no rules or established themes and no stage. “I was particularly adamant about the no-stage thing,” co-founder Cara Brigandi said of the set-up, adding that participants sit in a semi-circle instead with the teller standing in its center. “I call it a dinner party without the dinner. Everybody is sitting around, talking, but respectful and we give people their time for the story.”

Judging: None. “Who's to say whose story is better than another's?” Brigandi said. “Everybody's story is extraordinarily important, and never to be repeated.”

Em is for moxie

By Nekesa Mumbi Moody

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Eminem's latest album is called "Recovery," but a better title might have been "Resurrection." On his seventh studio release, Eminem finally has returned to form, which is to say he's obnoxious, misogynistic, violent and often hurtful, but through it all, rarely short of brilliant.

After his last album, 2009's "Relapse," many wondered whether rap's most successful and perhaps most talented rapper would ever do anything to merit the tag "brilliant" again. "Relapse" was a painful listen, with Eminem trying to recapture his former glory after four years off battling drug addiction. For Eminem, that meant an album that consisted mostly of tired insults and violent imagery without any of the wit that once accompanied it, making it charmless, humorless and forgettable.

What Eminem goes back to are the best elements that made him such a groundbreaking rapper when he made his debut over a decade ago: sick but hilarious humor; clever, biting lyrics and great storytelling.

The best tracks on the album delve into Eminem's troubled psyche. On "Talking 2 Myself," he lashes out at himself for his jealousy for rappers who have overshadowed him (such as Lil Wayne and Kanye West) while his drug troubles have left the one-time rap champ punch-drunk. And on "25 to Life," he even attacks the love of his life who has tormented him for the last time—not Kim, his ex-wife and favorite target, but hip-hop.

Eminem is not trying to go be the rapper he was on "Without Me" or "The Real Slim Shady," which is good. You can play a character only so much before it becomes a caricature.

What's best about "Recovery" is that Eminem has emerged from the bleakness not only restored, but improved—and renewed.

LOVE IT

ALBUM
The Sellout
Macy Gray

Instead of chasing pop hits to reignite her career, Macy Gray decided to fill "The Sellout" with music she liked. She probably won't be alone in appreciating this collection of upbeat, uptempo, soul-tinged pop numbers. The first single, "Beauty in the World," is a straight-up pop anthem—a foot-stomping, hand-clapping sing-along about blue skies and sweet music. "Kissed It" is a stadium-rocker, while "That Man" twists an Amy Winehouse retro-soul vibe around some clever lyrics. It's all so well crafted that Gray should be converting "The Sellout" into sold-out shows in no time. GLENN GAMBOA, NEWSDAY

VIDEO GAME
Toy Story 3
Xbox 360, PlayStation 3

There's a level to "Toy Story 3" that's likely to satisfy players of any age. It's called the Toy Box, an open-world playground that starts off as a dusty Wild West town. Any one of the three main characters can be sheriff, and other "Toy Story" regulars give you missions. Weirdly enough, the one game the Toy Box reminded me of was "Red Dead Redemption"—minus all the prostitutes and corpses. Like "RDR," "Toy Story 3" delivers a wide-open landscape of seemingly endless possibilities. It's one of the most adventurous movie games ever created, and it's a delight. LOU KESTEN, AP

Ray Drecker (Thomas Jane) can't get a break. Financial difficulties led the coach to prostitution in Season 1, but that's only added to his problems. The big man is still at the whims of the women in his life. Ray's two pimps—meek Tanya (Jane Adams) and Alpha female Lenore (Rebecca Creskoff)—are fighting over their "product." And Ray has it bad for his ex-wife (Anne Heche). Anyone who didn't watch the stellar first season could assume "Hung" is a low-brow comedy, but it's much more. It's layering on even more heart, smarts and danger this season. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

Were we duped by the Bush administration into starting a war in Iraq? According to this film, we were. It supposes that Iraq's weapons of mass destruction never existed—it was a lie told by the administration, which will kill anyone to cover it up. Matt Damon stars as Chief Warrant Officer Roy Miller, who begins to doubt the administration's claims. No matter what you believe, this is an exciting thriller. DOUG NYE, MCT

LOATHE IT

ALBUM
Can't Be Tamed
Miley Cyrus

The real issue with Miley Cyrus' new album isn't how suggestively the 17-year-old is dancing or her midriff-baring, no-longer-a-girl pics. It's how confused she sounds. When Cyrus is focused, as she is on the Ke$ha-riffic AutoTuned adventure "Permanent December" and the rebellious, if monotoned, Britney Spears-ish dance number "Robot," she's hard to resist. When she's wandering through a karaoke-grade version of "Every Rose Has Its Thorn" or the loopy Jason DeRulo rip-off "Liberty Walk," where Cyrus raps, she's hard to take seriously. GLENN GAMBOA, NEWSDAY

Awkward love

John (John C. Reilly) has had a rough seven years since his divorce. His life feels back on track, however, after he meets Molly (Marisa Tomei), who appreciates John's preference of honesty over coolness. Trouble is, John thinks Molly's 21-year-old son Cyrus (Jonah Hill) might secretly be trying to drive them apart.

The buzz: Cast-wise, writers-directors Jay and Mark Duplass ("The Puffy Chair," "Baghead") get a much-deserved call-up to the big leagues. The filmmakers have a perceptive eye that always was better than their mumblecore peers and qualifies them to find the subtle dignity in oddballs.

The verdict: Once John and Cyrus start going at it, the film seems more broad and familiar than it actually is. With hints of Judd Apatow and Noah Baumbach's "Greenberg," "Cyrus" sits precariously on the border between life's potential for happiness and disaster. John can't quite get a handle on Cyrus, and the movie captures that suspense of trying to understand the relationship between two other people. In past efforts the Duplass brothers have gone deeper, but the moments between John and Molly are some of the year's most blissfully romantic. MATT PAIS IS THE METROMIX

Oui, madame!

By M. Kathleen Pratt

Cute little European-style wine bar Vintage 338 has been charming Lincoln Parkers since opening in April. Of course, there's not much Lincoln Park loves more than a wine bar—except, perhaps, brunch. And now Vintage 338 has that covered too. We checked in on the Sunday service to see how it's faring since launching Memorial Day weekend.

Server says: Savory is the way to go. Try the prosciutto and serrano hash ($8), mashed up with fingerlings, onion and bell peppers and topped with a fried egg ($1) or brie ($2) if you like; or the croque madame ($10).

We say: Croque madame, please. This one's all about careful construction: Sliced pain de mie gets layered with gruyere, ham and mornay sauce, then baked and sliced lengthwise (picture a layer cake with alternating layers of bread and ham and cheese) before it hits the griddle. It's topped with a traditional fried egg and light hollandaise.

Feel free to pass on: The stuffed French toast ($9), unless you have a real sweet tooth. With about half as much filling, this dish might have worked, but as it was, the sweet honey-cinnamon cream cheese filling made for a sweet overload.

Is it lunchtime yet? Savory crepes (spinach, portabella and chicken in mornay sauce) walk the line between breakfast and lunch, while a grilled Mediterranean veggie sandwich on ciabatta ($10) is more afternoon-appropriate.

Day drinking: The somewhat fussy fare here lends itself to a mimosa ($9), but the mild bloody mary works too ($9). It's thinner than a typical bar bloody (Grey Goose helps it go down easy) and served in an elegant tulip glass, plus it gets a well-appointed skewer of house-marinated olives, sopressata and manchego.

Buzz factor: Weak. The watered-down coffee didn't have much oomph.

Crowd surfing: Though the crowd was thin on our visit, the smattering of brunchers who drifted in and out was a nice microcosm of Lincoln Park life: fresh-faced young couples in sundresses and cargo shorts; co-ed groups in full Cubs regalia; and students/recent grads with Mom and Dad in tow.

Best seats: With most indoor seats a few steps below street level, the dining room can feel a bit gloomy during the day. Take a seat up front by the windows or better yet, grab one of the 10 recently added sidewalk seats along Armitage Avenue.

Comprehend it like Beckham

Translate the World Cup with our British-to-American dictionary

By Ryan Smith

FOR REDEYE

Don't know your knocks from your touches when it comes to soccer lingo? Join the club. Most Americans are relative noobs when it comes to appreciating the world's game, and ABC and ESPN added a measure of difficulty by assembling an all-British crew of play-by-play announcers. To help guide you through the British football slang, RedEye has created a mini-dictionary of terms. Cheers. RYAN SMITH IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

DIVE (NOUN)

A dive occurs when a player reacts to a minor—or even phantom—collision with more unnecessary drama than a Nicolas Cage performance in order to win a free kick. A dive usually consists of a player writhing on the ground, sometimes clutching a part of the body that never even was touched.

See also: The “flop” in basketball

KIT (NOUN)

Don't worry. When an announcer comments on how good a player's kit looks, it's nothing dirty. Nor does the word have anything to do with “Knight Rider.” Kit simply is the British term for a soccer player's equipment and attire.

See also: Uniform

BOOK (VERB)

Most of our uses of the word “book” in verb form have to do with making an appointment or registering for something. But the British soccer use of the word is closer to the kind of booking we see in “Law & Order”—formally charging someone with a crime on a police register. In the World Cup, a player is booked when he is given a yellow or red card.

See also: Personal foul, penalize

MARK (VERB)

Mark is a term that means a player guards an opponent one on one. Strangely enough, in America we don't have a single word that means this specific thing. Bollocks!

See also: Man-to-man defense

FIXTURE (NOUN)

When British announcers talk about Italy and Brazil's upcoming “fixture,” it doesn't mean both countries are going to Lowe's for some home improvement. Instead, it refers to a match that's been arranged for a time and place.

TOPIC

Finish this joke: A Cubs fan and a White Sox fan walk into a bar ...

... and the Cubs fan says to the Sox fan, I'm single, and if you buy me a double you can drive me home.

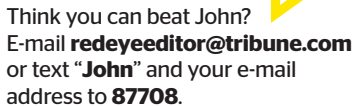

... and the barman looks at the two and says, “Your teams are kind of a joke.”

... and the White Sox fan ends up paying (Cubs fans have day games, Sox fans have jobs).

Both decide to drown their sorrows. Neither has left the bar yet.

... and the bartender says, “Beat it. This is a Blackhawks bar.”

Listen to John Williams from 9 a.m. to noon on Chicago's WGN Radio 720.

RedEye's Puzzle Master will stump you with his brainteasers at redeyechicago.com/puzzler.

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at redeye.chicago.com/puzzles. EDITED BY MICHAEL MEPHAM

FOUR RACK TOTAL _____
TIME LIMIT: 20 MIN

Make a 2- to 7-letter word from the letters in each row. Add points of each word, using scoring directions at right. Finally, 7-letter words get a 50-point bonus. “Blanks” used as any letter have no point value. All the words are in the Official Scrabble Players Dictionary, 4th Edition. Find the answer at redeyechicago.com/puzzles.

Pass the mic

All of the following phrases accurately describe Daniel Radcliffe: “Harry Potter” personified; nude Broadway thespian; exorbitantly wealthy 20-year-old; hound dog.

Err ... make that singer of “Hound Dog,” you know, the Elvis tune. Radcliffe recently spilled to MTV that he’s something of a karaoke fanatic, and “Hound Dog” and Muse’s “Feeling Good” are his go-to songs.

“I love karaoke,” he said last week at the grand opening of Universal’s Wizarding World of Harry Potter, according to mtv.com. “I am one of those people [who says], ‘No, no, I can’t, I couldn’t possibly, no, I won’t ... all right, give me the mic!’ And then I’m elbowing other people out of the way to get to the stage.”

Radcliffe also revealed that he often karokes with “Harry Potter” cast mates Rupert Grint and Oliver Phelps, who play Ron and George Weasley. Hmm. If we were ever at a karaoke club with the “HP” stars (God, are you listening?!), what tunes would we point them to in the oversized songbook? ARIEL ALEXOVICH, REDEYE

Rupert Grint

“You’ve Got a Friend in Me,” Randy Newman

Maybe we’re still on Cloud 9 after seeing “Toy Story 3,” but we can’t think of a better song to capture the bromance between Harry and Ron.

Ralph Fiennes

“You’re a Mean One, Mr. Grinch,” Dr. Seuss

Who cares if it’s not Christmas? We only wish Voldemort’s heart had the capacity to grow three sizes in one day.

Robbie Coltrane

“The Purple People Eater,” Sheb Wooley

Ol’ Hagrid loves his magical creatures, probably even one who ate people.

Michael Gambon

“Supercalifragilisticexpialidocious,” Julie Andrews and Dick van Dyke

Mary Poppins’ word is fun to say, just like “Dumbledore” is fun to say.

Alan Rickman and Tom Felton

“Don’t Go Breakin’ My Heart,” Elton John and Kiki Dee

Professor Snape and his star student, Draco Malfoy, should sing this classic duet as a loyalty oath to Slytherin.

Emma Watson “Be True to Your School,” The Beach Boys

Hermione loves Hogwarts just like the real-life Emma loves Brown University. Welcome to the American education system, Emma. Now sing some Beach Boys.

Rhymes with maven's

Talk about a great moment in improvisation. Cameron Diaz had to think on her feet when she forgot the name of her “Knight and Day” character this week during a visit to Comedy Central’s “Daily Show.”

“June. No, er, well I’m not going to spoil it for you,” she told host Jon Stewart, according to the New York Daily News. Diaz then admitted she had not yet seen the film, which was released this week. For the record, Diaz’s character is June Havens. So close, Cameron. So close.

Wade

Dwyane Wade is about to become one of the NBA’s hottest free agents, and now he’s a free man after a Cook County judge finalized the Oak Lawn native’s divorce Friday. “I feel relieved,” Wade said after a process marked by lawsuits on both sides. Or, as Wade’s attorney, James Pritkin, put it: “Mrs. Wade has committed her final flagrant foul. Her game is over.”

‘Bachelorette’ souvenir

Fedotowsky

Kasey Kahl may have been booted from “The Bachelorette,” but he’s keeping a big memento from the ABC reality show: a 6-inch wrist tattoo he got pre-booting to prove his love to bachelorette Ali Fedotowsky. But Kahl’s not worried about it. “I got it to show that I was genuine and sincere about who I am,” he said, according to usmagazine.com. “It doesn’t necessarily mean that that works for Ali.”

THE DIGIT

The number of trophies won by “Avatar” on Thursday at the Saturn Awards, presented by the Academy of Science Fiction, Fantasy & Horror, according to the Los Angeles Times. The 3-D epic won every category for which it was nominated.

More ‘Fockers’

Brace yourself for more silly name jokes and awkward encounters. The trailer for “Little Fockers,” due out in December, dropped this week. One particularly horrific scene involves an erectile dysfunction drug and a needle. We wouldn’t expect anything less.

Snooki

J-Woww

Hangover fashion?

Watch out Ray-Ban. The kids from “Jersey Shore” are encroaching on your turf. Jenni “J-Woww” Farley, who has the Filthy Couture fashion line, told people.com, “I want to do sunglasses with her.” That is, Nicole “Snooki” Polizzi. When asked what Snooki would bring to the table, J-Woww answered, “spunk.” Fair enough.
